

#present365

HIV and COVID – What’s love got to do with it?

Featuring Jason Warriner, Director of Care, Quality and Governance at Cranstoun

Friday 30 July 2021 | 12.30pm – 1.30pm | Free online event

Jason Warriner will be talking about the history of the HIV pandemic and the similarities with the COVID-19 pandemic. Issues covered will include stigma, the impact on individuals and how we as health care professionals can learn from pandemics.

Jason is a registered nurse who has held senior roles in the NHS and charity sector, gaining experience in clinical, operational and governance roles. His clinical areas of expertise include sexual health, HIV, and homelessness and he is currently Director of Care, Quality and Governance for Cranstoun.

To book your place at this FREE event, please click on the link below and you will receive a confirmation email with joining instructions:

www.rcn.org.uk/news-and-events/events/hiv-and-covid

#present365

This event forms part of RCN Northern, Yorkshire and the Humber regions’ #present365 series which focuses on promoting and celebrating diversity and inclusion across the nursing profession. The hashtag #present365 was developed to support a strong anti-exclusionary narrative that generates discussion and celebration of specific issues throughout the year rather than confining them to a single day or month. We should be learning about diverse histories or herstories as a central part of understanding human history so that diversity is #present365.

For enquiries or further details, please contact:

Emma.Phillips@rcn.org.uk

